

Office ergonomics software with a human touch

Repetitive motions and static positions can hurt your employees.

Trying to manage an office ergonomics program can also give you a headache, especially when potential solutions are intolerably complicated, and extremely expensive.

AtlasOffice™, our web-based office ergonomic software system, takes the pain out of office ergonomics.

Self-Assessment and Training is a Solution

For low- and moderate-risk office employees, a simple and focused self-assessment and training can help them avoid injury risk and stay productive. AtlasOffice™ helps by:

- Determining employee risk through a configurable, 10-minute online survey
- Providing customized training and learning verification/ knowledge reinforcement
- Offering specific recommendations (both for existing equipment adjustments and/or new products) based on survey responses

With a small investment of time and money, most of your employees will know more, feel better, and stay productive.

People in Real Pain Need to Talk to Real People

Not all problems can be fixed with technology. AtlasOffice™ helps with higher-risk office employees by offering a human touch.

AtlasOffice™ will:

- Identify employees who need telephone or on-site support
- Allow employees to upload pictures and videos to support distant analysis by ergonomic resources
- Provide a proven online report format to make telephonic or on-site assessments faster, easier, and more accurate
- Guide and simplify recording and tracking closure of recommendations
- Provide you unlimited follow-up surveys to help monitor risk and verify you've solved the problem

Through a combination of software and a personal touch, both your employees and your budget will feel cared for.

Want More Control?

AtlasOffice™ is designed to provide you complete control of your office ergonomic program, including the ability to:

- Insert your brand or private label on the web pages, reports, and employee access
- Customize the employee self-assessment survey
- Customize training materials and learning verification tool, including different languages
- Upload your employee list to facilitate and improve proactive program participation
- Control user access for internal and external support personnel
- Monitor and measure overall program performance through dashboards and drill-down tables
- Download application data for further study

An Affordable Solution

With AtlasOffice™, there are no startup or annual fees. Costs are based on the number of employees who are provided access. Plus, if you're a large organization exclusively using Atlas for telephonic and onsite assessments, AtlasOffice™ can even be free.
